David Walliams is an English comedian, actor, and bestselling children's author. Walliams was born on August 20, 1971, in Banstead, England, a suburb of London. His father was an engineer, and his mother was a lab technician. In 1992 Williams graduated from the University of Bristol with a bachelor's degree in drama.

His most popular books include Mr. Stink (2009), Billionaire Boy (2010), Gangsta Granny (2011), and Demon Dentist (2013). Many were adapted into television movies or plays. Walliams's picture books include The Slightly Annoying Elephant (2013), The First Hippo on the Moon (2014), and The Bear Who Went Boo (2015).

Offscreen, Walliams gained attention for his charitable work. He often cycled and swam in well-publicized events to raise money for the organization Sport Relief. For example, he participated in the group's swim across the English Channel to France in 2006 and along the length of the Thames River in 2011. Walliams was made an Officer of the Order of the British Empire (OBE) in 2017 ("David Walliams").
